Claims Stepfather Also Her Husband

PETERSBURG, March 1.—C. C. Clements, white, was arrested by local police yesterday morning on charges preferred against him by the authorities of Salem and Marion while he was at work for the city on Wythe street in Blandford. A few minutes later Miss Vaine Joiner, formerly of Marion, was taken into custody with Clements.

Salem authorities claim that Clements married Miss Joiner's mother in August, 1920, while Miss Joiner claims to be the wife of Clements at the present time. Miss Joiner was for five years an inmate of the Baptist Orphanage Asylum, Salem. The charge is also that Clements persuaded the girl to elope with him.

The girl claims that she and Clements were married in Bristol four days after she ran away from the asylum. Clements denies the girl's statement. They were residing here at 314 Brown street. Clements claims that he was arrested to take the girl away and return her to her mother and intended to give her proper protection.

Miss Joiner claims that they were married by a Baptist minister on the 9th of last December. She claims to be 20 years old. The girl and woman are being held here pending further instructions from the Salem and Marion authorities.

Shy a Bridegroom, Wedding Postponed

NORFOLK, Va., March 1.—When Edward Parham, who was to have been married to Miss Alice Pell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Pell, failed to appear at the Berkley Avenue Baptist Church at 7 o'clock last night, the wedding invitations were recalled and the affair called off, at least as far as the parents of the bride-to-be have been concerned.

Preparations for the wedding had progressed favorably, it is understood, up to the prescribed moment when the nuptials were to have started—but there was no bridegroom. Inquiries were made. It was learned that owing to illness resulting from an attack of the grip Mr. Parham had been forced to remain at his home.

The wedding-to-be was considered by many to mean one of the crowning affairs of the winter social season here. Preparations had been made for a grand affair and a trousseau had been completed.

Invitations to friends of Miss Pell had been placed in the mails days before. In fact there was nothing left to make the affair a complete success. Then the arrival of the bridegroom. Thus was the proverbial "waiting at the church" made a fact in real life in Berkley.

Wreck Bank and Escape With $1,345

FAIRMONT, N. C., March 1.—Bailed by the strength of the time-lock safe which withstood the shock of a large amount of explosives, professional yegmen nevertheless forced their way into the vault of the Bank of Fairmont at 4:30 this morning and got away with $1,345 in silver and pennies.

The tremendous explosion wrecked the bank building and started a fire which heaved a large amount of damage to many bank books and important documents. The exact amount of the loss will not be known until the debris is cleared away. Officials of the bank said this morning that all losses were covered fully by insurance, including the stolen money.

Eye-witnesses have been found who claim to have seen a man rushing from the bank building immediately prior to the explosion. This man was said to be without hat. Inside the bank building a hat was found, which is supposed to belong to one of the men engaged on the job.

The yegmen went about their job in a businesslike manner. They broke into the bank building and then tackled the combination of the vault. They mastered and got the $1,345. Confronted by the safe door, they resorted to explosives, which, while strong enough to wreck the building had little effect on the safe.

The robbery is the worst in many years and excitement has been running high. The bank will reopen officials said, in a few days.

Guggenheimer Is Given Big Amount

RICHMOND, March 1.—Damages of $10,000 were awarded Sylvan F. Guggenheimer, of Richmond, by a jury in law and equity court which tonight returned a verdict in Guggenheimer's $50,000 suit against R. L. Durham and the Southern Seminary, Inc., of Buena Vista. Guggenheimer's suit was based upon false and malicious accusation alleged to have been made against him by Durham, who was president of the seminary last year when Miss Ruth Hanks, of Minneapolis, a student at the seminary, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Guggenheimer to their home in Richmond for a few days before returning home at the end of the school term. Telegrams sent by Durham to Mrs. Hanks, alleging that Guggenheimer had kidnapped the girl formed the basis of the suit.

When the evidence for the plaintiff was concluded this morning, counsel for Durham and the seminary entered demurrer, contending that the evidence presented does not make the defendants liable for damages under the law. This point will be argued later, and the verdict for damages tonight is subject to the action of the court upon the demurrer.

In the argument, Hiram M. Smith, Richmond attorney, led off for Guggenheimer. He was followed by Wyndham R. Meredith, attorney also of Richmond, who alone pleaded the cause of the defendants, contending that Durham's position was that of "his two parents" and it was his duty to see that the girl returned to her home in Minneapolis after school closed. Meredith charged that Guggenheimer was guilty of breach of faith in bringing the girl to Richmond contrary to the mother's orders. It was testified that the families were acquainted and the girl had visited the Guggenheimers here on a previous occasion.

Harry M. Smith, Jr., of Richmond, also counsel for Guggenheimer, made his closing argument. He was severe in his arraignment of Durham, declaring that the latter had poisoned the mind of Mrs. Hanks in telegrams dispatched to her at Minneapolis in connection with the case. He regretted that he was denied the opportunity of questioning Durham. Durham's attorney on whose advice the warrant was said to have been sworn out. He refuted sarcastically to the fact that they had elected to permit Meredith, a paid lawyer, to plead their case alone.

It was argued that before Judge Crump on the legal points involved in the demurrer would be heard at a later date. Should Judge Crump sustain the demurrer, the verdict of the jury as to damages would be nullified. Mayor Updike, of Buena Vista, who dismissed the criminal charge against Guggenheimer, following a hearing before him, was among those present in court today.

Wood Saves Lives Of Many Dogs

MANILA, P. I., March 2.—(United Press.)—The Igorotes are going to quit eating dogs, meeting recently with Governor General Leonard Wood, promised they would give up the food that made them famous, for the more high-brow food of goats and sheep.

The Philippines became too well known, and disreputable so, when they demonstrated their dog-eating proclivities at the fairs in the United States years ago. Governor Wood told the chiefs, "They gave the world an impression that they were the real type of the Filipino."

The dog market at Baguio, in the mountain provinces of North Luzon island, is one of the show places of the Philippines. Every Sunday morning all the big and little Igorotes gather from their hillside homes and barter in dogs. The leaner the dog, the better chow he makes and the higher price he brings. The eater buys the leanest dog, fattens him on rice for several days—and then roasts him as he is.

"You folks are beyond this primitive, stone-age stuff," Governor Wood said. "Citizens of America think of the Igorotes when they think of the Filipino. And was not."

Elopes With Ma-in-Law

Polite Bandits Calm Women

NEW YORK, March 1.—Three robbers, the leader more than six feet tall, entered an H. C. Rohack store at Fulton and Linwood streets Brooklyn, about 6:30 p. m. yesterday. There were more than 20 persons in the store, most of them women.

"Stik 'em up!" commanded the big man, and a bulge in each overcoat pocket led his hearers to believe that he had a revolver gripped in each hand. They stuck 'em up. The three robbers and the manager, Henry Hen, were ordered from behind the counters and the women were ordered to their rear.

"Don't be afraid," the tall man said to the 15 or 20 "stuck up" women. "Nobody's going to hurt you."

While his companions were looking the cash register of about $500, some of the women betrayed their anxiety, however. Several of them tried to drop their purses or hide them on the shelves of the store.

"You needn't do that," said their vigilante guardian. "We're not going to trouble you."

One woman tried to leave the store, but he stopped her with a few low-spoken words, telling her she would have to wait until they got through. An automobile with a man at the wheel was waiting in Linwood street and the three hold-up men drove away in it.

Robbers were out early yesterday and went to work on three other stores, two in Brooklyn, and one in Manhattan. On one instance the alleged thieves were caught and the other two they overlooked $1,200 and got $296.

The scene of the Manhattan robbery was the Atlantic and Pacific tea store at 338 Ninth Avenue. Three armed men entered the store after it had been opened. Two of the robbers held up the manager, Peter O'Berne, and his assistant Elary Price, and forced them into a room at the rear of the store.

The third man took off his hat and coat so that he might wait on customers while otherwise engaged in robbing the cash register. He waited on three customers and all he got out of the cash register was $10.

The three men then set to knocking the storekeepers, after which they escaped in an automobile. There was $200 hidden in the store.

O'Berne notified the police. He said he recognized one of the hold-up men as one of the number who three weeks ago robbed the store of $135.

Is Jazz Dance Mind Menace?

Psychological, Church, and Terpsichorean Circles
Split on Moot Question.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Is the modern dance craze mentally dangerous?

This question was debated in psychological, church and terpsichorean circles today when dispatches from Paris stated that influential journals and famous academicians had indicted jazz as "a hypocritical form of obtaining illicit pleasure."

"The modern dances are as soothing to the populace as rocking is to the infant," declared Dr. A. A. Brill, chief of the clinic of psychiatry in Columbia University.

"Jazz is to our national life what impurity is to a woman—prostitution," affirmed the Rev. Dr. John Loeck Straton, the famous fighting pastor of Calvary Baptist church.

George Washington loved to dance, why this outcry?" retorted S. Chalf, high priest of the dancing hierarchy, who once tripped toe in the czar's ball.

"I don't care how much young people shimmy, if they only take the proper positions and cling to a few forms of etiquette," explained Canon William S. Chase, of the Protestant Episcopal church.

"Jazz is not for 'sweet sixteen,' said Clarette Taylor, the actress starting in a play that depicts jazz evils.

Jazz is a manifestation of the speed mania of the age," stated Frank M. Thomas, Mrs. Taylor's leading man, who plays the role of a jazz opponent.

Dr. Brill, who gained renown in scientific circles when he translated Freud into English, and who proclaimed a national authority on psychoanalysis, said that animals and birds "knew."

"The new dances represent a substitute for the normal gratification of the sex instinct in the form of pleasure motion," he continued.

"Viewed in this light the modern dances must be considered beneficial to our great sex system. People won't sit home and read the Bible all the time," he added, with twinkling eyes. "There must be some outlet, some diversion for the populace."

"This cry against modern dances is nothing new. When the waltz first came into use, such Byron—who certainly was not a dancer, expressed his indignation in this poem:

"Waltz—waltz—both legs and Liberal of feet, and lavish of caracards, Hands which may range in public sight."

Where before—before—
Pray—put out the light."

"There is not doubt that the closer contact in the modern dances offers an opportunity to those individuals who look for sex everywhere. But this might have happened even before the new dances came into vogue."

Dr. Straton, however, sees encouraging handwriting on the wall of time.

There are faint signs of a return to social sanity," he averred. "The fact that French academicians and

Careless Shampooing
Spoils the Hair.

Soap should be used very carefully. If you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo (which is better than anything else you can use).

One or two teaspoonful of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky. Bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified—adv.

Adventure Trail Gold In Tunnel Among Andes

LONDON, March 1.—Somewhere in the Argentine province of Jujuy, writes a correspondent in Buenos Aires to the Daily Mail is a well-lit tunnel in a mountain of the Inner Andes, lies a king's ransom consisting of more than ten million pounds of gold.

At least it should be there in history and legend are to be trusted. That it is believed to be there is evident from the fact that almost every year some expedition sets out from Buenos Aires in search of the treasure.

One such expedition, headed by an American mining engineer, has recently returned, all the more impressed by the circumstances of its failure to reach the gold that the enormous wealth actually does exist.

History and legend relating to this treasure agree fairly closely.

When the Spaniards under Pizarro invaded Peru they took prisoner the Inca king, Atahualpa. He offered to buy his liberty, and told his captors that he would fill the room in which he was confined with gold and silver to the height to which the tallest soldier could reach with his sword point.

Atahualpa promised more treasure, and word was sent throughout the kingdom to bring in every bit of precious metal in order that the cupidity of the conquistadores might be satisfied and the sacred person of the Inca "Son of the Sun" might be free.

Atahualpa was burned at the stake on August 23, 1533.

Legend has it that when Atahualpa died a vast caravan of llamas was en route from the Argentine side of the Andes to Cuzco with every ounce of gold the Indians could scrape up.

Spies from Cuzco met the caravan, reported the death of Atahualpa, and the ransom was then taken to the Cerro (mountain) Granadas and there waited up in a tunnel, where it has since remained.

Underlying the legend there is at least some consequence with accepted facts of history.

The territory all around Mount Granadas is known to be gold bearing and there are ancient mines and Inca workings. Gold is to be found almost everywhere, but its profitable working today under modern conditions is problematical.

The Indians of the district are the direct descendants of the ancient Inca tribes, and among them the legend of the buried treasure received full credence.

On the crumbling walls of an old Jesuit mission house, near the pueblo of Tarma, are Indian paintings of flocks of heavily laden llamas heading toward a mountain.

It is doubtful whether the exact location of the tunnel is known. However, it is claimed that an old Frenchman has actually located it in the face of a precipitous cliff, 1,200 feet high, on the mountainside.

Several expeditions have gone out in search of the treasure, but none has yet found the tunnel or even scaled the cliff. Those who believe that the gold exists and that the legend is true doubt whether the treasure chamber itself will ever be found.

Discoverer Of Truth Serum
Explains Drug's Work

DALLAS, Tex., March 2.—Dr. Ernest House, country physician of Persimmon, who started the nation by his "discovery of truth serum" at last has broken his silence. He granted his first interview today to the Bee correspondent here.

Dr. House's "truth serum" is a drug that he says paralyzes the imagination and renders one who takes it incapable of telling a lie. Its practical value is in the examination of criminals and crime suspects.

The active element in this drug is scopolamine, the same substance that is used in the "twilight sleep" method of painless childbirth.

Long Retired
When Dr. House's discovery first became known, Dr. House refused to discuss it. He even refused to let his name be made public. All because of medical ethics.

After successful tests of the drug had been made here—

After a negro in Dallas county jail claimed his freedom when he took the "truth serum" test, when state witnesses refused to accept the ordeal—

After state authorities decided to permit tests at the State penitentiary under joint supervision of Dr. House and State Health Officer John H. Florence—

Dr. House decided he could safely speak.

I speak only with the intention of aiding those officers who wish to test the efficacy of "truth serum," Dr. House said.

Encourages Experiments
The best way to develop the possibilities of this drug and its value in criminology is to encourage as many experiments as possible.

"I make no extravagant claims for the drug. I simply say that in the cases of 500 women to whom I've administered scopolamine in childbirth cases in the last six years, the drug has proved its power to inhibit imagination and prevent the patient from telling anything but the truth.

The method of administering "truth serum" is entirely different

Wife Is Killed
By Young Son

WHEELING, W. Va., March 1.—Aroused from sleep shortly after midnight by the screams of his mother, August Hanko, 14 years old, arose and shot his father, Henry Hanko, 35 years old, two bullets entering the brain and causing almost instant death.

When Mrs. Hanko and a 16-year-old daughter returned home just before midnight, she was accused by Hanko of having attended a dance.

A quarrel followed, during which Hanko struck his wife. She screamed and the daughter screamed a revolver which the wife snatched but could not discharge. Hanko struck her again just as the boy appeared.

Says Taylor Lived in Fear

W. S. Underwood, Held for Embezzlement, Declares
Director Told Him of Premonition.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 1.—William Desmond Taylor, slain motion picture director, lived in constant fear of death by violence, according to statements made by W. S. Underwood, held in the county jail on an embezzlement charge.

Underwood declares Taylor frequently told him of his premonition that he would be slain, but never divulged the name of the person, or persons, he feared, and always declined to give the reason for his belief.

Edward F. Sands, sought for weeks in connection with the slaying, was in Los Angeles on the day following the slaying, preparing for a quick dash to Mexico, Underwood said. He added that he was a personal friend of both the missing man and the slain director, and that he attended a number of parties given by the latter.

Underwood was arrested some days ago at Topeka, Kan., at the instigation of persons who believed he was Sands. He was later held on a charge of embezzling funds from the Famous Players-Lasky company. He is to be tried here on that charge.

Underwood declares that he met Sands at the corner of Seventh and Broadway on February 2, the day following the slaying. After a few words of greeting, he asserts, Sands said:

"Well, I'm heading South. I probably won't see you again."

"Where are you going?" Underwood said he asked.

"Either Mexico or South America," Sands is alleged to have answered.

Underwood made a statement which, in substance, is as follows:

"Some weeks previous to the murder I was sitting alone in a downtown cafe, when Taylor and a party of friends entered and took the table next to mine.

"He was in a jovial mood and within the next 30 minutes, observing that I was alone, invited me to join his group. I accepted."

"In the party were a number of women, recognized as having been in the motion picture screen—women that were known to the world over as actresses of the first degree. I will not give their names, because I do not wish to involve any of them in this unpleasant affair."

These same women, however, I saw on numerous occasions when I was a guest at the Taylor bungalow on Alvarado street. I have my own theory regarding the slaying and the connection of these people with it, but as to this angle I have nothing to say."

Underwood said that he met Sands as he was coming out of a downtown theatre, but that the murder of Taylor was not mentioned during their brief conversation. He also maintained that he had no actual knowledge of the tragedy, and did not expect to be asked to furnish the police with information.

Acting upon information from San Francisco that "Mrs. Walker," sought by the authorities in connection with the slaying of Taylor, is in Los Angeles, police officers and deputy sheriffs began a systematic canvass of all local hotels. While details of this development were not revealed, it follows the search for a woman in San Francisco by Detective Sergeant Herman Cline and Jack Steirzeide.

"Mrs. Walker" is the woman to whom a telegram was addressed by a picture actress on the night of the murder. The message read: "I am in trouble. I need help."

It was discovered, it is asserted, that she, too, had sent telegrams to the slaying of Taylor, in the case, and this is also to be checked. Officers familiar with the new angle declare the woman's testimony is of the utmost importance to checking facts in the case, which may ultimately lead to the solution of the mystery.

The "confession" of Harry M. Fields, now held in the Wayne county (Michigan) jail on a forgery charge, is no longer considered a factor in the case.

THURSDAY, MARCH 2 1922
EGYPT TURNS TO DEMOCRACY.

Another great step toward world democracy has just been taken. Although announced in a very brief paragraph in the newspapers, it is the significant and important announcement by Prime Minister Lloyd George, of Great Britain, that that country would soon relinquish its protectorate over Egypt which it has maintained now for more than seven years. This means autonomy for the Egyptians, one of the oldest of all empires and one rich in history. It means the opportunity for self-development as well as self-determination. In centuries gone by Egypt was one of the most highly civilized and progressive of the ancient empires, and it still possesses monuments and memories of its ancient learning, skill in construction and artistic ability.

Relinquishment of the British protectorate over Egypt means the establishment of autonomous government, functioning through a parliament and a ministry of foreign affairs. This concession by the British was withheld until tranquility and subservience to existing authority had been restored. In a word, the British government would not grant sovereignty as an arbitrary demand backed by the threat of force. That is a characteristic of the British people. They will not be bullied, but they are responsive to peaceful overtures. The great Welshman who played so large and influential a part in the winning of the war and who later solved the apparently insoluble Irish problem has surprised the world again by dealing with the Egyptians. In quitting Egypt and leaving it to her people to organize and maintain their own government without dictation or foreign interference, the British ministry has stipulated that its right and power to provide protection for foreign communities in Egypt shall be recognized and conceded.

In this matter the attitude of Great Britain is in striking contrast with that of the United States with respect to the Philippines. For nearly twenty years now we have been promising the Filipinos their independence, yet they are still virtually governed by a distant and a foreign power. Why do we persist in deluding those insular people with false hopes for so long? It is becoming plain that the government of this country under Republican administration is unwilling to let go anything on which it gets its name and which offers opportunity of exploitation and profits by and to selfish American interests. Thus, though we boast of our democracy, we have let a monarchy manifest more real democracy toward a subject people than we have shown the Filipinos. If the Filipinos are unit for self-government after twenty-three years of American domination it must be apparent to all that we have made a very poor job of our boasted purpose of a benevolent assimilation. We need a real revival of our democracy in our own country, which we profess so much pride in. What memories are evoked by the prospective change of Egypt from an ancient monarchy to a republic or a "eral democracy in the form of limited monarchy." Some of Napoleon's greatest campaigns had to do with the conquest of Egypt and for many decades the French dominated the country. Later Great Britain fought her Egyptian and Sudanese wars and found the Egyptians a wild and a militant people. It was in Egypt that Chinese Gordon won his crowning fame and there later that Kitchener of Khartoum became widely known. In a word the ancient empire is a shrine of history.

Canadian Government Will Have to Kill Buffalo

WAINWRIGHT, Alta., March 2.—With the Buffalo in the government park at Wainwright now being more than 5,000 and with provisions for the herd, now the largest in the world, essentially exhausted, the Canadian government is seeking ways to exterminate surplus animals. There is an excellent market for buffalo meat. All over Canada and the United States some of the surplus bulls, it is said, can be sold at five per head, both for hides and for meat. Some of the killed this winter for the market. Buffalo robes, the Dominion Park commission says, command a price of $100 apiece. Experiments have been made in tanning buffalo hides.

Some one sent the editor of a certain paper a few bottles of home brew. The same day he received for publication a wedding notice and an auction sale ad. Here's how it came out in the paper: "William Smith and Miss Lucy Spivak were disposed of at a public auction at my farm one mile east of town. She wore a beautiful set of cases on her breast and two white calves, before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about seventy guests, including two milk cows, six mules and one bob sled. Reverend Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of hay rope and the bridal couple left on one good John Deere plow for an extended trip with terms to suit purchaser. They will be at home to their friends with one good baby buggy almost new and a few kitchen utensils after ten months from date of sale to responsible parties and fifty chickens."

35 Radio Broadcasting Stations Now Active

THIS MAP SHOWS LOCATION OF THE 35 RADIO BROADCASTING STATIONS NOW FURNISHING CONCENTS AND NEW TO 1,000,000 HEARERS.

BY EDWARD THIERRY
NEW YORK, March 1.—Have you got your "ear to the air?" Thousands have. Enthusiasm over the wireless telephone is spreading tremendously. From a fad and a toy the radio receiving set has become a household convenience.

Out of the air come daily news bulletins, lectures, sermons, vocal and instrumental concerts, operas, market reports, government time signals, shipping news, weather forecasts, fashion tips, agricultural reports, church services and children's bed-time stories.

Radio broadcasting service is available in all parts of the United States. Probably not less than 250,000 receiving sets are in operation, the daily audience that listens in numbering more than 14,000,000 people.

There are 14,000 amateur transmitting stations operated by enthusiastic experimenters and capable of short distance broadcasting. Numerous government stations broadcast official business, but also can be used in distributing speeches or messages to the country at large.

35 Stations Active
Broadcasting stations giving public service now are operated in 35 cities. Here is the list:

NEWARK, N. J.—Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company station, hourly service from 11 a. m. to 10 p. m.

NEW YORK—Western Electric Company station (experimental); occasional service.

ROSELLE PARK, N. J.—Western Electric Company station (experimental); occasional service.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—Westinghouse station; hourly service.

HARTFORD, Conn.—C. D. Tuska Co. station; concerts Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings.

MEDFORD, Mass.—American Radio and Research Corporation; news service.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Union College station; occasional programs of music.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Commercial and hotel stations broadcasting concerts every evening. California Theater broadcasting performances nightly.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Hamburger's department store; daily service.

SAN JOSE, Cal.—Harold Laboratories station; daily service.

Other cities having broadcasting stations include: Cleveland, Philadelphia, Columbus, O., Buffalo, Detroit, Mich., Akron, O., Hamilton, O., Seattle, Wash., Houston Tex., Davenport, Ia., Iowa City, Ia., Rome, Ga., Paris, Tex.

This list does not include government stations, except the Arlington Station. In addition the government has 230 land radio stations. Probably the biggest public service broadcasting station in the country is being built by the American Telegraph and Telephone Company in New York. After it is placed in operation, others will be built in various centers over the country.

Eskimo Skeletons to Be Subject of Study

HALIFAX, N. S., March 2.—Thirty-three skeletons of Eskimos from the Mackenzie river area have arrived, and will be sent to Dalhousie University, where they will be measured and studied for the Canadian government by Dr. John Cameron. The skeletons were collected by the Arctic exploration expedition sent out by the government. They represent the Eskimo tribes inhabiting the Mackenzie and the coastal region between Point Barrow and Coronation Gulf. This is north of the Indian country. The exact ethnological status of the Eskimos, it is believed, will be determined. Anthropologists agree they are of Asiatic origin.

Find Buried Treasure On San Antonio Trail

CROCKETT, Texas, March 2.—Buried treasure has been found here. For the past 50 years, at different times, searchers have dug at this vicinity and in the country through which the old San Antonio Trail, known as the King's Highway, passes. A pot of treasure was recently uncovered near here by a local resident. The pot was filled with silver coins, trinkets, medals and a few pieces of old jewelry—all in a perfect state of preservation. The dates on the coins—1795 to 1812—furnished the only clue to when the pot was buried.

Section Hand Finds Sixty Pounds of Silver

BUENOS AIRES, March 2.—A section hand working on a railroad line between Salta and Huatungilla the other day cursed as his sick unexpectedly struck something solid and rebounded. But when he had dug around the obstacle it was discovered to be a chunk of pure silver weighing pounds. It is thought that probably the silver was lost, perhaps hundreds of years ago, from the back of a mule when being transported through the bleak Andes Mountains from far away Peru.

Cult Plan To Kill Babies and Aged People, Brings Police Guard

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, March 2.—Kill off the weak, that the able-bodied may be free to roam the country as vagrants, protest against the taxes levied on them by the government of British Columbia, and preach "be coming of Christ."

The plan—the throwing of all children under 10 years old, and all old people into the Columbia river, has been announced by the Doukhobors, a strange sect of religious communists who live in western Canada.

And it has aroused Canadian authorities to the extent that Royal Canadian mounted police are keeping a close watch on Doukhobors settlements.

The Doukhobors came to Canada from Russia in 1898, fleeing from the persecution of the czarist government because of their objection to military service.

7,000 Founded Colony
About 7,000 founded the ocean and settled on land given them by the Canadian government near Yorkton in northern Saskatchewan. They were pacifists, cared little about education and did not mix with their neighbors. They wished to be let alone, to live their lives in their own way.

Peter Veregin is the leader of the sect. M. Kottinoff is manager of the colony at Brilliant, B. C., and it is from him that the announcement of the drowning scheme came.

Veregin backed up the plan by saying, "Although the statement of proposals was signed by Kottinoff, yet it had my sanction."

The leaders have urged that the property of the colony be liquidated and that the able-bodied strike out as roamers. This proposal is said to have met with much enthusiasm at a mass meeting recently held at Brilliant.

Would "Educate Women"
Kottinoff has admitted that he expects the women of the sect to oppose the drowning of children. In that event, according to the leaders, another plan—to educate the women to house being mothers—has been suggested.

PETER VEREGIN

"Taxes are becoming so heavy," says Kottinoff, "that it is not economic to raise children."

In 1900 the Doukhobors started the colony by starting on a "nude" pilgrimage near Yorkton. Moving as far as the head of Lake Superior they were corralled by Canadian authorities and forced to put on clothes and accept shelter. Two years later this was tried again. More government action and the sect settled down, turned to farming, and grew prosperous. No member has received pay for his work—merely food, clothing and shelter.

Veregin, as leader, has accumulated a fortune. He wears modern clothes, makes frequent trips to the cities and talks intelligently on world topics.

The WRONG FACE

By
ISABEL OSTRANDER

BEGI NHERE TODAY
FAY TUDOR, wealthy orphan, suffers a nervous breakdown in France after the news of the death in battle of her brother.

WILBUR and Martha Tudor, sister and brother, are met by her aunt, an attractive widow, MRS. CLARA TUDOR, and the latter's daughter.

LAUREL, the summer colony is frightened by the report of a "wild man" whom Fay believes she has seen peering in the windows of the Tudor estate. Sheriff Hulse and his friend, SERGEANT JOHN BARRY, a New York detective, investigate. Fay is attracted by the personality of CAPTAIN WARREN, her brother's friend, who was with Wilbur when he fell. On the night of Mrs. Tudor's dance, Laurel confesses to Fay that she is in love with HARRY CADMUS, an old love of Fay's but for whom she no longer cares. Fay congratulates Laurel, wishes her happiness and the two girls prepare to retire. An approaching storm prompts Laurel to close the windows.

GO ON WITH THE STORY.
"Oh, we must have the air!" Fay protested. "If you are cold in the night."
"Night!" Laurel exclaimed with a little laugh. "It's almost morning. Oh, Fay, dear, I'm so glad you don't care about Harry and me! There have been times when I almost hated you! Will you forgive me for being so horrid to you in my thoughts?"
Fay laughed. "Of course, dear. I wish you and Harry all the happiness in the world. Good night."

It was nearly noon the next day when Martha opened the door softly and entered with the breakfast tray. Outside the wind whirled through the trees and a hard driving rain slanted in at the opened windows.

With a shiver the maid placed the tray upon the table and went over to close the windows. As she passed the bed upon which Fay lay the girl noticed a movement and turned over, but did not awaken, and from the other bed there came no sound or movement.

The younger girl was lying on her side, one arm thrown up, and her head, which was almost buried in the pillows, and her dark hair fell over the side of the bed nearly to the floor.

Martha hesitated for a moment and then touched the bare arm lightly. The next instant she had recoiled, for the arm was icy cold, and now for the first time she noticed that a strange bluish shade had crept over the fair skin.

Laurel's lips had fallen silently apart, her eyes were half unclosed and showed dull and glassy to the other's horrified gaze, while over the pliant features of the girl came the same hideous bluish pallor, it seemed as though a hand had been passed, robbing them of all expression.

"Miss Laurel!" The words came in a stinging whisper from Martha's lips. "Miss Laurel, what is the matter? Speak to me!"

Her voice died away in her throat and she laid her trembling hand for a moment on the girl's breast. "Faintness," she said, and she turned and fled from the room, and down the stairs.

CHAPTER V
An hour before noon, Sheriff Hulse and Sergeant John Barry, who had been waiting for the Tudors approaching them at a speed which aroused all the former's professional enthusiasm. He stepped out into the road with an authoritative upraised hand, and Frank came to a grinding stop.

"I am after Doctor Green, sheriff," "What's up?"

"Don't know myself, but according to Martha, it's sudden death and looks uncommonly like murder."

"Murder!" The sheriff looked at his companion. "Guess we will both go right along with you, Frank."

The two officials climbed into the machine, and as Frank started off again, Sheriff Hulse asked:

"Tell us about it. One of the guests of the party last night found dead in the outhouse?"

"Yes, Miss Tudor herself—Miss Laurel Tudor. When Martha took chocolate upstairs to the two young ladies just now she found Miss Fay all right, but she said she was sliding down upon it with her headless eyes gazing into space. Ask Doctor Green to come to me, Fay. And then I—I should like to be alone."

Fay closed the door softly and went down the hall to where the doctor waited with the young police official from the city.

gether? They always share the same room?"

"Yes. Since Miss Fay's return from France they have occupied this room together, just as they always did when they were little girls."

"Do they always sleep with the windows closed like this?"

"No, wide open. I closed them myself when I brought the chocolate in this morning, because the rain was beating in frightfully."

"You are sure of that, Martha? You are positive that the windows were wide open all night?"

"Positive!" Martha gazed at him for a moment in astonishment, and then approached the nearest of the windows. "See, the carpet and curtains are still soporific wet, doctor. What has happened to Miss Laurel?"

"She is dead, Martha, and has been for some hours. I think I will go now and have a look at Miss Fay."

Fay had regained consciousness and was seated upon the side of the bed.

"WHAT IS THE MATTER? SPEAK TO ME!"

bed, wrapped in a dressing gown. Her hands were clasped tightly together and she was staring straight before her as though scarcely conscious of the presence of the doctor, the sheriff, who hovered in the doorway.

The latter turned to the physician. "Anything suspicious about it, doctor? Anything in my line of work?"

"Yes, doctor, a peculiar bluish tinge which has suffused the entire surface of the skin. We find that usually in cases of asphyxiation, an hypoxemia is manifested by a bluish tinge, since there is no illuminating or coal gas in the room, the windows were wide open, and the other occupant, Miss Fay, here, seems to have been quite unaffected."

"Doctor Green, take a chair up to the bedside and possessed himself of one of Fay's cold, listless hands."

"My dear, what can you tell me of this? Did anything disturb you during the night?"

"Nothing. It was quite late, nearly morning when the doctor broke in, and the guests left. Being in mourning, you know, I did not appear, but the light and music and general bustle kept me awake, and when Laurel came upstairs we had quite a long talk. She was in the very best of health and spirits, doctor. In fact, I remember that she said she had never been so happy before in all her life! Has Aunt Clara been told?"

"No, and it must be done immediately. Do you feel strong enough to go to her?"

Fay hesitated, but only for a moment. Then the old indomitable spirit came to her rescue.

"I will go, Doctor Green."

The girl went down the hall and opened her aunt's door.

"Why, Fay, how you startled me! Is anything the matter? Is Laurel ill?"

Fay took both her aunt's trembling hands in hers.

"Not ill, dear. You must be brave, and let me tell you. Laurel died in her sleep."

"My God!" The slim hands were torn from Fay's grasp and seized her shoulders in a vise-like grip. "You cannot know what you are saying, Fay! There must be some hidden mistake."

"Yes, Aunt Clara, Doctor Green is here, and the sheriff. Will you see them?"

"The sheriff! Why, what does it all mean? Sit down upon the bed, dear, and don't you look at me with those eyes gazing into space. Ask Doctor Green to come to me, Fay. And then I—I should like to be alone."

Fay closed the door softly and went down the hall to where the doctor waited with the young police official from the city.

Gob Walked 500 Miles: In Search of a Situation

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Unable to find work at Lima, Ohio, Delbert Leist, who as a gob in the navy trod the deck during the World War, walked 500 miles to Washington to find a job. He had lived here before and even if the government is firing down the thousands, Leist thought he could land a job. Congressman Cable found him temporary employment and hopes to land him a permanent job under the civil service.

Appropriate $50,000 to Decorate State Capital

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 2.—Portrayal across the front of the capitol building recently was decided upon by the Capitol Decoration commission. The commission appropriated $50,000 for the work. It will require about three years to complete the frieze. The governor's reception room is to have portraits of Mark Twain, Eugene Field, James S. Rollins, founder of the University of Missouri and Susan Blow, who introduced the kindergarten into the American system.

Profiteering in Wives Is the Newest Rage

LONDON, March 2.—Profiteering has spread not only all over the world but has spread to the speech here. "Before the war," he said, "a wife could be bought for four shillings in Sudan. Now she costs eight. In the cattle country a wife used to cost four cows, now she costs seven."

STATE HIGHWAY MEASURE TO BE CALLED SOON

RICHMOND, Mar. 1.—The bill reorganizing the State highway department was today taken from committee and placed on the calendar. This places the bill in a position to be called at anytime.

The prohibition bill was agreed to by the Senate today, the amendment making purchasers of liquor liable to a fine for such purpose, was retained by a vote of 22 to 15, and the final vote on passage was 29 to 9. The bill now goes to the House for concurrence. It means that there will be a conference on the measure. Transporting, selling and making liquor carries severe penalties, and where a driver uses a car for transporting liquor, without the consent of the owner, he will go to the roads for six to twelve months.

The Senate adopted the conference report on the redistricting bill, which gives Bedford, Franklin, each a member of the House, and with the two counties, Floyd county is given a "float." The bill providing for the audit of the books of the county and city officers handling State funds was also passed.

Twenty-five secretaries take care of the pope's daily average of 22,000 letters.

Prime Minister's Threat to Resign Is Big Sensation

LONDON, March 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The prime minister's threat of resignation has been the political sensation of the day. Hints of Mr. Lloyd George's resignation have been current ever since Sir George Younger, head of the conservative party organization, engineered a revolt of some fifty "die hard" Tories against the premier during the latter's absence at the Cannes meeting.

One outcome of the revolt was a practical split in the coalition, and public abandonment of the so-called coupon system under which heretofore candidates, whether conservative or liberal, entered the electoral contests under a united banner.

The attitude of the "die hards" is that they decline to recognize Lloyd George's leadership unless they are allowed to dictate the policy of their coalition, which would include restoration of the legislative veto of the House of Lords, and a protective tariff.

The prime minister is said to have threatened to resign when he returned from Cannes, but was dissuaded by Austen Chamberlain. Since then, dissension in the coalition has proceeded rapidly. A large body of the conservatives showing a disposition to support the revolting element. At the same time, recent by-elections in which the government candidates were defeated, tended to show that the country was completely out of sympathy with the coalition, while the labor party and the Asquithian Liberals, who are opposed to coalition, are constantly gaining strength.

The general impression is that an election cannot be far distant, but there is still an alternative, namely, the resignation of the premier, in which case the king might call upon Mr. Chamberlain to form a cabinet to carry on the government. This government in the general opinion, however, would have a short life.

TRIP TO MUSCLE SHOALS DELAYED

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Little progress was made in Congress today by committees engaged in the consideration of proposals from private enterprise for the development, operation, lease and purchase of the government's projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

The Senate agricultural committee still was unable to reach a decision on the question of how many senators will visit the shoals territory or when they will go.

Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, requested the agricultural chairman to delay the trip temporarily so as not to interfere with Senate consideration of the treaties which grew out of the armament conference.

The 25 members who expressed a desire to see the Alabama projects, would compel the Senate to discontinue its business, it was said, and that possibly could not be considered at the present time.

Only a forenoon meeting was held today by the House military committee on the proposals submitted by the Alabama projects, which are the subject of the shoals properties, entirely given over to a legal discussion between Hubert Dent, chief counsel for the Alabama Power company, and Representative Oliver Deming, Alabama, as to the legality of the contract held by the company, giving it the exclusive right to purchase the steam power plant at Warrior in event the government should dispose of its interest there.

When approached in regard to the matter the governor stated that he would be glad to come if a previous engagement did not interfere, stating that he would let the management know as soon as possible whether he could come. ARREST OF 7TH MAN IN TAYLOR CASE EXPECTED

LOS ANGELES, March 1.—Arrest of a seventh man, which is expected, would bring into custody a motion picture actor of some prominence, was predicted tonight by local officials in connection with their investigation of the murder of William Desmond Taylor, motion picture director. They said the man was believed to have been in the confidence of peddlers of drugs and liquor.

The officers declined to make his name public prior to the arrest.

Six men already are under arrest as a result of disclosures made recently by John Rupp, which it was learned at the trial of the last of the group, that he was the last of the group.

It was announced tonight that Marcel Normand, film actress, one of the last to see Taylor alive, had been questioned today by Detective Sergeant Herman Glue, head of the homicide squad at the request of District Attorney Woolwine. It was stated she was unable to give the officers any new information.

When the actress learned the official wished to question her it was said, she came to Los Angeles from Atlanta, where she recently was ill with influenza and a nervous breakdown.

BELIEVED INDOOR SPORT OF PUPILS DENOUNCED

CHICAGO, March 1.—Pupils of the first six grades will not have to find the greatest common divisor nor the least common multiple if elementary schools a long reformers advocated this afternoon at the meeting here of the Board of Control of Public Schools. Katherine D. Blake, of New York, in giving the annual report on arithmetic, said that "mathematical puzzles and conundrums should be eliminated."

Home work must also be dropped, she said. "So far as the first four grades are concerned, and work should be done in class, where the teacher can see that proper methods and habits are developed."

PRINCESS, "BROKE," FLEES TO AMERICA AS A STOWAWAY

PRINCESS TSCHERNITSCHEW

NEW ORLEANS, March 1.—An American princess, widow of one of the richest men of Russia during the czar's regime, today is penniless and held by officials at this port, hoping that friends will come to her rescue and obtain for her admission into the United States.

She is Princess Tschernitschew, formerly Miss Elizabeth Schlic. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schlick, who lived for a number of years in New York. Her mother was a Russian noblewoman.

A few years ago she left America to become the bride of Prince Ivan, a scion of the Romanoffs. Today, no longer a citizen, she is threatened with deportation. She has gone through horror after horror.

Her husband was torn from her side and crucified. Her son was taken from her and is believed dead. Her husband's estate, worth millions, was confiscated and she herself escaped only after months of suffering and adventure.

"Our home was in Castle Grazeno, at Kiev Novgorod," she says. "It was all that Russian castle were in the days of the imperial regime. When the Bolsheviks attacked the castle in 1919 my husband was crucified on the arch of the central entrance, and after that he was shot."

"I did not see it, but my maid, Clara, was an eye-witness. In the presence of the invaders my husband had beat me to convince them that I was a servant."

U. S. Relief Administration's Troubles In Feeding Countries

MOSCOW, March 2.—The Ukraine has scored a diplomatic victory over the Russian Soviet Government which made it necessary for the American Relief Administration to sign a separate agreement with the Ukraine before it could legally open food draft warehouses and general relief work in that southern republic.

American workers were distributing food packages at Kiev, Odessa and Kharkov for some time without any agreement other than that entered into with the Moscow government.

The Ukraine insisted that it was an independent state, fully competent to conduct relations with foreign powers and entitled to be dealt with as an autonomous nation wholly free from Moscow control. President Rakovsky, of Ukraine, recently conferred in Moscow with American Relief Administration officials and made his position clear.

The Ukraine wanted food packages and relief from America but it wanted to sign agreements with the Americans which the Russian government would not do. Furthermore it wants to negotiate with Americans for a loan to relieve its economic distress.

Kennedy's Mother Testifies at Trial of Mrs. Obenchain

LOS ANGELES, March 1.—Mrs. J. D. Kennedy, mother of J. Belton Kennedy, testified today at the trial of Mrs. Madeline Obenchain, charged jointly with Arthur C. Burch with the murder of young Kennedy in Beverly Glen last August. The mother said that within a week after Mrs. Obenchain was married in January 1919, she began acting queer. Belton Kennedy at his parents' home, as she had done habitually before the wedding.

As Mrs. Kennedy told her story in almost inaudible tones, she kept her eyes turned away from Mrs. Obenchain. The latter, sitting beside her counsel, showed no reaction to the woman with an unflinching stare.

Mrs. Kennedy also said she learned of the marriage, intercepted a call and asked Mrs. Obenchain about it. The latter admitted the marriage, the witness said. Then Mrs. Kennedy asked her, according to her evidence, whether she deemed it right to continue to call up Belton, a single man, and Mrs. Obenchain said that she did not, but continued to do so.

At the conclusion of Mrs. Kennedy's evidence, the State announced it had no more witnesses except Mrs. Faith, who testified in the Burch case, and that she could not appear until Monday. They asked leave to rest and reopen then. The defense declined to agree and the jury was excused until Monday.

Delicate Issues Up In U. S. Court

Modern "Mrs. Solomon" to Decide Which Mother Gets Baby.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Miss Kathryn Sellers, judge of the juvenile court, today shared honors with King Solomon, the "wisest of the wise," when she essayed to decide the parenthood of a seven-month-old baby ardently claimed by two women.

The women are as strangely different as the stories they have unfolded, each averring that she is the real mother. One is an Italian, Mrs. Maria Antonio Mattio, who recently arrived in this country and the other is Mrs. Etta Peck, of Tuxedo, Md.

The Italian woman claims she put her child in the custody of Mrs. Peck, being unable to care for it at the time of birth. Mrs. Peck admits receiving the child, but declares she gave it to another woman, who took it to Georgia. In the meantime, Mrs. Peck says, a child had been born to her.

But the dauntless little woman who recently left the sunny shores of Italy for the "promised land" only to step into her present difficulty, refuses Mrs. Peck's story.

"She has not sent my baby away," says Mrs. Mattio. "It is my baby she says was born to her."

On the other hand, Mrs. Peck emphatically denies Mrs. Mattio's statement and declares she will fight to the utmost for the custody of the child. And that's that.

The story begins in the early summer. Mrs. Mattio comes to America, and then to Washington. A few days later a baby is born, but Mrs. Mattio is unable to care for it. So, on the advice of friends, she advertises for some family to care for the child.

Under the name of Mrs. Mary Smith, Mrs. Peck offers to care for the child. An arrangement is made and Mrs. Peck takes the girl to her home in Tuxedo. This was late in August.

But for the timely advent of Miss Agnes Ferriter, Red Cross worker in Prince Georges county, which embraces Tuxedo, the story probably would have ended here. Miss Ferriter learned that Mrs. Peck was ill in bed and decided to visit her.

Entering the house, she found Mrs. Peck and was informed that a baby had just been born.

"How old is this child?" asked Miss Ferriter.

Whereupon Miss Ferriter promptly suggested that Mrs. Peck return to bed.

"Oh, no. In our family the women are always out of bed within a few days," is said to have been the reply.

But Miss Ferriter, disliking conditions in the house, investigated and found Mrs. Peck had recently adopted a child. Through the Maryland authorities she obtained the child's custody. It was later ordered sent to the custody of the Children's Guardians by this time Mrs. Mattio had stepped into the picture.

Mrs. Peck followed the child to Washington and sought its custody from the board. But officials of the board decided it was a case for the juvenile judge, and the case was referred.

And today a woman, fittingly appropriate in these modern days of suffrage and women's rights, will enact the role of Solomon the Wise in deciding this afternoon who is the real mother of the baby.

"That is Mrs. Mattio's child," declared Mrs. Mollie Dariano, who the seven-month-old baby was brought into the Juvenile Court building this morning.

"I certainly should know the child. When Mrs. Mattio told me she could not care for the baby, I took the boy home. Several days later I noticed an advertisement in a newspaper which had been inserted by Mrs. Peck asking for a baby to adopt."

"I wrote Mrs. Peck and she came to my house, saw the baby, and said she would adopt it and give the boy a good home. A month later I saw the baby again, having visited Mrs. Peck, whom I told when arrangements had been made for the adoption of the baby that I would want to see the boy frequently."

Mrs. Peck claims that she gave Mrs. Mattio's baby, a few days after she took it from me, to a woman who lives in Georgia. This is not true, because Mrs. Mattio's baby is the child now in court. I could never forget the features of this child, particularly because they are those of an Italian. Mrs. Peck's husband is not an Italian."

Man Raises Corn With

All the National Colors

WASHINGTON, N. C., March 2.—Levi Randall's patriotic corn is the marvel of farmers. Randall is exhibiting grain on the ear in the national colors. On the same ear are patches of red, blue and white grains. Presumably the corn came from a mixture of varieties. So far no one has claimed to find any "pattern" indicating an effort on the part of the growing corn to achieve a flag or coat of arms. An ear of Randall's corn has been placed on exhibition in a local barn.

Girl's Temperature

115; She Had Flu

BRISTOL, Eng., March 2.—A temperature of 115 degrees registered for a girl "flu" patient here is to be the subject of a report to medical authorities. A local doctor, called to the case, found her temperature to be 115. Believing his thermometer wrong, he tried two others with the same result. Special treatment was given and the temperature declined to normal. It rose again to 108, declined to normal and re-rose to 114. The girl is now convalescent.

Cherokee Indian Will Visit China

LAWRENCE, Kas., Mar. 4.—Ruth Muskrat, a Cherokee Indian girl from Oklahoma who is a student at the University of Kansas here, will visit China this spring as a delegate to the World's Student Christian Federation Conference at Peking, April 4.

The hope of the conference, Miss Muskrat explained recently, is to get students of various parts of the world in vital touch with each other and, among other things, solve the problem confronting Chinese students who have become imbued with Occidental ideas.

"The primary need of my people," Miss Muskrat declared, "is trained native leadership—Indians themselves, who understand the peculiarities of the tribe and can work with them."

"Indian women are more capable in most respects than the men. They know better how to barter—they are shrewder. This is an outgrowth of the time when women raised the crops. The men go in more for social activities. If I have a party, I can always count on the men attending. But if I want to put on a financial drive, I appeal to the women."

Germany Now Has a Three-Man Republic

BERLIN, March 2.—A three-man world republic, with regular money, postage stamps, constitution and titles—everything, in fact, but a home—is being operated from a suburban villa here. Its president, Prof. Carlos Freytag, "Prince of Aran"—the republic's title—and, he claims, representative of the Oriental University at Washington, declares he has so far been recognized by Luxembourg, the Straits Settlement and the Fiji Islands. For the time being, he is the "Count de Foix," and "Professor Kurt Martin, Baronet of Aran," he offers to sell university degrees and titles at anything the applicant can pay.

Americans Find Liquor Costly at Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, March 2.—A delegation of guests headed by Americans yesterday protested to the management of a hotel at Menton, near here, against the price of whisky. The hotel bar charged 12 francs, now one dollar, for the traditional "three fingers." "What's the use of leaving America?" indignantly queried the leader of the delegation. The price was reduced to six francs.

Paraguay Has Two National Languages

ASUNCION, March 2.—Paraguay, which is the smallest and most remote of the South American countries, is at the same time the only one that is the proud possessor of two national languages, both of which are official. One of them is Spanish and the other is Guarani, or tongue of the partially civilized Indians who possessed the land before the arrival of the Spaniards. Guarani is spoken everywhere, being heard on the streets as frequently as Spanish. The language is composed of short and snappy monosyllables.

Dancers Were Adorned in Earrings in Berlin

BERLIN, March 2.—The local purity campaign has begun, and Lot Bach will wear clothes for the next month at least. Fraulein Bach and her troupe of dancers, who have roused all sorts of sensations in a cabaret, were in the police court. Fraulein Bach was given a month's imprisonment and her associates were fined after a purity worker had testified they were only earnings in addition to the charms Nature gave them.

MRS. HOOPLE CALLS HER HUSBAND'S HAND

Today's Fashion Hints

By MARIAN HALL

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Ruffles and big hats! What could be more delightfully summer-like? Claire gives us a very clever combination of the two in this frilly frock of white silk crepe and the large straw hat thickly clustered with colorful fruits and flowers.

The frock is an exceedingly girlish thing with a very full skirt and the new and very popular high neckline. Ruffles finish the neck and sleeves as well as border the skirt. Nestled in the ruffles of the skirt are found a new and really lovely touch—small bunches of brightly colored flowers. At the left side of the waist line one finds another cluster of flowers, a charming accent, for it is quite true that small ones are being accentuated this season.

The hat, like so many of the smartest hats shown for midsummer wear, is of lavender straw, soft and pliable. It droops slightly and is heavily ornamented with flowers, fruits and foliage of pastel tints.

An abundance of trimming, very colorful trimming, is being worn on all of the newer hats intended for summer wear. Grasses dotted with yellow flowers are often used effectively on large black hats fashioned of fine brims.

WILL TAKE THREE WEEKS TO REVIEW ALL EVIDENCE
MONROE, N. C., March 1.—At the close of a day devoted entirely to argument of counsel, it was predicted tonight that the hearing of the so-called "par-clearance" bank case before Judge J. L. Webb in Superior court here would be concluded about noon tomorrow. Judge Webb has indicated that he would take two or three weeks in which to review the evidence presented and briefs to the submitted by counsel on the two sides before rendering his decision. The afternoon session was taken up by the argument of Henry W. Anderson of Richmond, counsel for the Richmond Federal Reserve bank, defendant in the action, which involves the right of the reserve bank to dishonor checks on State chartered banks of North Carolina because they refused to pay such checks in cash without charging exchange. Two more addresses are to be heard tomorrow. H. G. Connor, Jr., of Wilson, N. C., will close the argument for the reserve bank and J. J. Parker, of Monroe, will conclude for the more than 200 State banks par- ties to the action in the role of plain- tiff. Three addresses were made at the morning session. Mr. Wallace, of Richmond and C. W. Tibbitt, Jr., of Charlotte spoke for the reserve bank and A. M. Stack, of Monroe, for the State banks.

A Study of U. S.
Secretary of State

Hughes Has Had Most Successful Career Since Becoming Cabinet Member—Some of His Achievements.

By A. L. BRADFORD.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, March 2.—In the front rank of America's greatest Secretaries of State.

That is the way Washington is thinking of Charles Evans Hughes, chief of the international relations of the United States, whose first year in this important office is closing with an unprecedented list of achievements.

Perhaps it is too early yet to pronounce such judgment on Hughes, but certain it is that he is well on the road of winning the honor of becoming America's greatest Secretary of State.

For Hughes can look back over the year upon so many accomplishments in the field of foreign relations of the United States, that it is difficult to record them.

When the lawyer and judge of great reputation and income took office the burden of work and responsibility that automatically devolved upon him was tremendous.

It was a time when never before in the history of the United States had a change of administrations found American policies in international affairs in such an uncertain state.

The action of the Senate on the Versailles treaty and the 1920 presidential elections, with other causes, had worked completely to disrupt the course of American foreign policy in the closing days of the Wilson Administration.

Hughes hung himself at this task. His greatest accomplishment may be described as follows:

During the closing days of the Wilson administration, the United States, because of the Wilson defeat, was no longer regarded in foreign capitals as the moral leader in world affairs; this country was hanging back, not leading or following. Hughes, it is conceded, has returned to America the role of moral leadership of the world.

When Hughes came to the State Department, he naturally did not have at his command the details and historical facts of the many problems in international affairs facing this government. But, he determined that he should have this information and not simply rely on the aid of his assistants and the experts in the departments.

He immediately ordered to his office all the records from the State Department archives in the cases of the various problems which he was being called on to decide. He spent long hours going thoroughly into these records.

Of course, the Conference on Limitation of Armament and Far Eastern Questions, just ended, had been Hughes' greatest achievement; it will undoubtedly be the crowning work of his career. In the negotiations leading up to the conference and in the parley itself, Hughes is regarded as having displayed the high qualities of statecraft. Among the great results wrought by this conference are the Naval Disarmament Treaty, the Four-Power Treaty dissolving the Anglo-Japanese Alliance and agreement to secure the peace of the Pacific, the Shantung settlement, the Open Door Treaty on China, and the other covenants.

When Hughes took office, an incipient war was engaging Costa Rica and Panama. Fighting was going on. The new Secretary of State immediately sent notes to both countries in effect demanding in the name of the United States government that the hostilities cease at once.

While Panama long held out, even appealing to President Harding direct, the question was finally adjusted as Hughes had said it should be.

The disruption of the Wilson foreign policy had resulted in an attitude by the allied powers which seemed to be aimed at "squeezing out" the United States from decisions in after-the-war questions, even those questions where vital American rights and interests were affected. A glaring example of this was the allocation and administration of certain enemy territories. An issue of the mandate question was made of Yap Island, a tiny speck of land in the far Pacific Ocean. The allies had allocated to Japan the mandate over Yap in violation of the reservation on this point made by President Wilson in Paris, and over the protest of the United States.

Hughes had been in the State Department only a few weeks when he decided to deal with the entire mandate question. He insisted that despite the rejection of the Versailles Treaty, the United States had succeeded to equal rights as the result of the war. It protested against the attitude of the allied powers regarding mandated territories and insisted that the United States must be consulted on the disposition of these mandated rights. It declared that the United States could not recognize the Yapan mandate as it had been awarded to Japan. This question has since been settled by a treaty.

Later Hughes was called on to act regarding the government's attitude on Russia. The Soviet regime, apparently moved by reports that the Harding administration might recognize it, sent a message to Washington asking to be permitted a delegation to this country to establish commercial relations between the United States and Soviet Russia.

Hughes replied immediately. In a short terse dispatch, reaffirming the Wilson-Hughes policy, and declaring commercial relations were useless so long as the present economic policies of the soviet government were maintained.

"Should the United States recognize the Obregon government of Mexico?" was a big question which faced Secretary Hughes. He called George T. Summerlin, charge of the American embassy in Mexico, to Washington and a definite Mexican policy was framed in consultations at the State Department. Summerlin took back to Mexico with him the draft of a new commercial treaty between the United States and Mexico.

"The fundamental question," Mr. Hughes said, "between the United States and Mexico was the protection of private property. This question was to have been settled in the new treaty by adequate and complete protection of American rights and interests, and this treaty was to effect to Obregon, not because of false reports at the time, which made a twisted issue of the question in Mexico, the Mexican chief executive has not yet accepted it.

The first real test of Hughes' personal statesmanship was during the reparations crisis of last spring. Germany was behind in her reparations payments; France was threatening to send her army into the Ruhr in retaliation. Germany appealed to the United States that President Harding arbitrate the reparations question.

Hughes replied to the German appeal, saying that if that country would submit a practicable means of meeting her reparations obligations, the United States would bring the proposal to the attention of the allies, but that this country would not do anything that was disagreeable to the allied powers.

Germany sent this proposal to Hughes. Then Hughes entered into important private consultations with the allied powers. He told France that the United States would not look with favor on her sending an army into the Ruhr, and is believed to have intimated an opinion that the German proposals had some worth in them.

Hughes achieved two big things—France did not carry out her desire to occupy the Ruhr, and shortly afterwards the allies, prompted by the attitude of the United States, arrived at a reparations settlement in London with Germany, which was regarded as the most just and practicable that had been worked out up to that time.

Hughes was faced with the all-important question of what sort of a peace treaty should be worked out between the United States and Germany. Hughes had held the view that the United States must be a party to many of the economic activities of the Versailles Treaty, because of their tremendous effect upon American interests. And for that reason, it was generally believed that he would recommend acceptance of the Versailles Treaty, with the needed reservations cutting out the League of Nations Covenant and making other changes.

As a matter of fact, he undoubtedly did recommend this course to President Harding. But because of the Senate situation, with feeling still running high against the mere name of the Versailles Treaty, the president and Hughes decided to have a separate treaty with Germany. This Hughes negotiated with the former enemy country, but it was practically an embodiment in a separate document of the provisions of the Versailles Treaty which Mr. Hughes thought it necessary for this country to subscribe to. This treaty country to peace with Germany is regarded as one of the most unusual documents in history.

Hughes has been a consistent and strong champion of the traditional policy of the "Open Door." An American concern wanted to put up a great wireless station in China and the other powers said to China she should not allow this because the powers had prior rights—in other words a monopoly, a violation of the "Open Door." Hughes sent a note to China, setting forth in strong terms that the "Open Door" policy should be upheld; and China let the American company go ahead with its contract for the wireless station.

Japan's military occupation of Siberia was a serious problem for Hughes. He sent notes to Japan making it plain that the United States opposed the retention of the Japanese troops in Siberia, and setting forth in the most definite terms that the integrity of Siberia must be respected. Withdrawal was promised by Japan at the Arms Conference.

Alexandria To
Have a Divorce
Probe, It Is Said

ALEXANDRIA, March 1.—Judge Robinson Monro, of the corporation court, who yesterday was asked by the Alexandria Ministerial Association to request the governor of Virginia to name a judge to call a special grand jury to probe the divorce situation here, today replied to effect that it is his purpose to have a full and complete grand jury investigation of the divorce situation at the earliest possible time.

He, however, says it was due the Bar Association committee, who have contributed much time and labor to their investigation, to allow them to complete same. He says the members of that committee who examined the records should be very proper witnesses to go before the grand jury and their knowledge would be complete.

Judge Monro also says he will insist upon appearing before the bar committee and making a statement. He says that a grand jury probably will meet about March 13 and he expresses an earnest desire to the ministers that they cooperate for a full, fair and impartial investigation.
